My core values and beliefs

My core values and beliefs are the things that are really important for me. As someone working on font development.

- Always Learning: Trying to get better at what you do by learning new things.
- Being Creative: Coming up with new and unique ideas.
- Adapting to Change: Being open to new ideas and adjusting to different situations.
- Focusing on Quality: Making sure your work is really good and paying attention to details.

My goals and aspirations

My goal is to become a good and skilled web developer. In the next 2-3 years, I want to be a full-stack developer. I am particularly interested in font-hand development. Additionally, I want to learn something new every day. I enjoy learning about all kinds of technologies related to web development. However, I give more priority to React.

I will take Steps to build my personal brand

- Thinking about what makes me unique.
- What i want people to know about you.
- Share my skills, interests, and values.
- Connect with people who work in the same field as me.
- Share my work and things on social media.

Building a personal brand is about making a clear and real image that shows who I am.

Personal branding differ from self-promotion, and distinction important

Personal branding is about showing who you are and what makes you unique. It's like creating a positive image of yourself. On the other hand, self-promotion is more focused on highlighting your achievements or skills to get attention.

The distinction is important because personal branding is about creating a reputation that reflects your values and personality. On the other hand, self-promotion might sometimes come across as more pushy or focused solely on selling yourself in the moment.

Personal branding is like telling your story and showing who you are. While self-promotion is more about saying, "Look at what I have done" Both have their place.

Which I am most proud of

- I can get along well with people.
- I can communicate with everyone safely.
- I like to do work on time.
- I always want to learn new things.
- I don't leave a task until it's finished.
- I don't like giving up on anything.
- I can easily adapt to new situations.

I enjoy meeting new people and chatting with them. I make sure to complete my tasks on time, and I'm always curious to learn something new. I don't give up easily; instead, I find ways to overcome challenges, and handling different situations comes naturally to me.